Things are different in the desert. The sky is bigger. The stars are brighter. The sunsets stop you in your tracks. It's a feeling that can't be conjured, landscaped or kindled with twinkling bulbs. Phoenix, America's fifth-largest city still has real cowboys and rugged mountains and the kind of cactus most people see only in cartoons. Phoenix is the gateway to the Grand Canyon, and its history is a testament to the spirit of puebloans, ranchers, miners and visionaries.

Projected against this rich backdrop is a panorama of urban sophistication: Resorts and spas that drop jaws and soothe souls. Stadiums and arenas that have hosted some of the world's biggest sports spectacles. Restaurants with inspired cuisine and unparalleled scenic views. Golf courses that beckon players the year round. And an abundance of activities to please everyone from the epicurean enthusiast to the outdoor adventurer.

An aerial night view of a city, likely Phoenix, Arizona, featuring a river, modern buildings, and palm trees. The sky is a mix of orange and purple, suggesting sunset or sunrise. A large white circle highlights a specific area in the middle of the city. The foreground shows a parking lot with several cars and a modern building with a curved roof. The background shows a dense urban area with many lights and distant mountains.
